Fall, 2007

Hello Everyone,

It is with great pleasure I can say the fall issue of The Constructivist is available for viewing. Co-editor Jane Tingle Broderick and I hope you will enjoy reading the articles as much as we did. We also thank our Editorial Board for their insightful reviews. Their expertise is a big contribution to each issue of the journal.

Bill Ayers, our ACT 2006 Conference keynoter wrote the Fall Feature. It's bound to make you think more deliberately about the consequences of what you do both professionally and personally. We have two interesting interviews in this issue. Rheta DeVries reflects on issues in her work with young children. Graduate student Lynda Northern interviewed Eric Jensen and considers the impact of his brain research on her teaching. More articles about teacher education and experimental programs round out this issue and will add to your understanding for teaching and learning. Enjoy!

We are introducing a new blog feature with this issue. Readers can click on the blog link, sign in, and add their reaction and insight to each of the articles. We hope this will invite deeper thought and some lively interaction among readers and authors.

You will want to check out the pictures from ACT 2006 last year in Lisle, Illinois under Conference News. The registration form for ACT 2007 in Berkeley is in this section as well. And, for ACT 2008, we have posted a Call for Proposals.

All the best,

Alice Wakefield
Act President
